London, June 14. Two Czechs were deprived of British citizenship today on charges of esplonage.

The Home Secretary, Mr Chuter Ede disclosed his action against Karl Strause and Antonin Raidl in a statement to the House of Commons.

Strauss, accused by Shawcross, Attorney-General, on Mach .13 of being a Czech spy, was expelled from France and shipped to Britain recently.

Some Press reports connected the expulsion by Paris police with the search for two missing British diplomats, Guy Burgess and Donald McLean, Strauss denied that he knew anything about the Foreign Office men. Strauss, 50, was naturalised in Britain in 1947. Last March Sir Hartley brought his name before Deprivation of Citizenship Committee alleging he was 'n Czech spy. He left Britain for France after the Committee hearings.

THE SOUTH AFRICANS THE OVAL

A brilliant sun shone from a cloudless blue sky as M.R. Barton led the Surrey XI on to the field for the first day's play in the match against the South Africans at the Oval. For the tourists it was a big occasion, the last match before the First Test at Nottingham. For the crowd it was a day to sit back lazily and watch yet another version of the fascinating bat and ball duel.

To the accompaniment of the clatter of trams, screeching and whining their way to and from the Festival of Britain site-about half a mile away-the tourists began their innings disastrously. Alec Bedser and Stuart Surridge are masters in the art of the new ball attack and between them they had the first three batsmen back in the pavilion for only 19 runs.

Longhurst On GOLF

Charles Coe, if he did not win the amateur golf championship, at least did one thing that has not been done for a long time. He set people talking once again about style.

This may sound strange to followers of other games. Why, after all, should not people talk about style in golf? The answer is that for many years, largely through transatlantic influence and a utilitarian passion for effectiveness at all costs, the words of the familiar ditty "It's not what you do; it's the way you do it" have been re-

Batting for just a little over two hours, he amply tested his injured thumb. Off drives, on drives, leg glances and late cuts, Nourse produced the lot without even once looking in any trouble. So easy did he make it appear that one began to wonder why the carly batsmen had found it so difficult. Shortly after the tea interval the South African innings closed for 209, not a big total by any means on an easy wicket, but better than one had anticipated in view of the poor start.

McCARTHY & MELLE

And then we saw those two young pace bowlers, MaCarthy and Melle, both of whom are at least a yard quicker than; any other bowlers in England today. McCarthy, with a slight tendency to "throw" the ball, did not look quite so effective as Melle, who has a beautifully compact action and follows through perfectly. So, on this occasion at least, it proved. For if the South African innings began badly, that was behind, this time on the off side; and off the fourth bail-no, not a wicket-he had Barton, the the latter in the Walker Cup had so far looked a poor lot. Happily for Surrey they survived the remainder of the day without misfortune but as the players came off the field at the close of play, the plaudits of the crowd were for the tourists who had struck back from such poor beginning.

My personal opinion was that the tourists have a fine opening attack and, it goes without saying that Mann and Athol Rowan (they did not play against Surrey), are two fine spinners. They are a very keen side in the field and play. the game as though they enjoy it.

But, and there is always a "but" an element of uncertainty comes in the batting. It must be disquicting for Nourse. By this time, the toutlets should liave become at least partially acclamatised and one can only presume from Saturday's play and providus showings that good seam bowling is going to cause them plenty of trouble.
